

Supper Club Sunday

What turns a restaurant into a supper club? That question is the bait for lots of banter within the Badger State, but out-of-stater's inquire with genuine perplexity. They ask about club membership fees and whether vacationers are excluded. Restricted access has never been a part of the deal because, like a good tailgate at Lambeau, more means merrier. The typical Wisconsin supper club doesn't take weekend reservations and has long waits for tables, but nobody cares. Downshift. Coast. Chill, why don't you? This is your destination for the night, not a hop between work and the theater. So talk among yourselves, engage strangers, flirt, eavesdrop, linger. Supper clubs are changing, but that doesn't mean they are vanishing. Morphing is a better word. That means, despite the best efforts of anybody to be absolute when describing supper clubs, few fit the description perfectly. Each supper club is one of a kind, right down to what decorates the walls and shelves: mounted game animals, vintage family photos, or kitsch from by-gone eras. The backdrop for these gems in a perfect world are:

- ◆ Lit up by neon lights outside
- ◆ Dimly lit inside
- ◆ Open for dinner only
- ◆ Loved by locals
- ◆ Family owned for generations
- ◆ Better for couples than children
